Funeral and Farewell Wishes

Whether in a Will, or letter, or document as follows, your funeral and farewell wishes are not legally binding on your executor, relatives and friends, but will usually be followed where possible and if reasonable.

This document may stimulate you to think of the kind of funeral and farewell you might like; and ensure that those who may be responsible for the events know your wishes.

Although there are advantages in planning your funeral and making your wishes known ahead of time, it is worth bearing in mind that your loved ones may also want to add their tributes, as their final farewell.

We recommend that you lodge a copy of your completed Funeral and Farewell Wishes and any other documents relating to your dying with your next of kin, whoever you are asking to help arrange your funeral and your solicitor.

I would like _____ to liaise with Hillier Funeral Service to make my funeral arrangements.
